Description

The Museum August Kestner is one of the few institutions to possess a complete copy of the so-called 'great Cades'.

Tommaso Cades, a Roman gem engraver, published this dactylitheque on his own initiative. August Kestner advised him on the arrangement.

This collection of impressions of ancient and post-ancient gems was created as one of the first 'research projects' of the German Archaeological Institute, co-founded by August Kestner. (AVS)
